

Abstract

The invention provides a method for stimulating the regeneration of a neuronal cell, said method comprising exposing the cell to the osteonectin protein or a functional equivalent thereof in an amount that is effective to stimulate the regeneration of the cell.